➔ An agreement of Senegal-Russian fishing: For better securing Senegalese waters

Between Russia and Senegal, the time is partnerships. A fisheries agreement was signed between the two countries during a visit to Russia, from 7 to 9 February, the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Senegal. This agreement aims to improve the security of Senegalese waters.

Cooperation between Russia and Senegal is doing well. Both Parties have signed a cooperation agreement in the field of fisheries. An agreement that is party to make the most productive Senegalese waters, providing them with a favorable outbreak of maritime security resources. 'The Agreement establishes the principles of cooperation in scientific, technical and economic matters between the two countries and can immediately implement the provisions regarding the training of Senegalese in Russia, satellite surveillance,' the statement said having sanctioned the audience with the head of Russian diplomacy in his Senegalese counterpart. Agreement also provides for the sending of a Russian ship for operations research with Senegalese researchers, and especially the organization of a control system against unreported and unregulated illegal. This latter practice is causing enormous problems to the Senegalese fishing and should significantly improve the performance of our waters.

Visit of Minister of State, Minister of Foreign Affairs was also an opportunity for the two countries to sign additional partnerships in several areas, including culture. Thus Me Madické Niang signed with Mr. Alexander Avdeef, Minister of Culture of the Russian Federation, a memorandum of agreement that focuses on strengthening cooperation in the fields of music, theater, film and visual arts. Russian Culture Minister expressed his country's readiness to provide training for Senegalese students in the field of culture. In the area of trade also emerge with different perspectives, the statement said, "the commitment of both parties to promote exchanges, through a strengthening of relations between the consular chambers of the two countries and the organization of forums for Senegalese businessmen and Russian, among other initiatives. An opportunity to exploit by Senegal, which may benefit from the exemption of customs duties for the entry of its products in Russia. " The mining sector has also featured prominently in the partnership agreements. Madické Niang informed his Russian counterpart of the resolution taken by Senegal to highlight its mining vocation, giving him hope that relies on support from Russia, given its significant potential in this area. Madické Niang invited the Russians to begin negotiations for an agreement in this area. Measures to strengthen cooperation between Senegal and Russia, have been reported for this purpose by the Russian side: Substantial increase in the number of scholarships offered by the Russian government to Senegalese students, creation of a Centre for the Study of Russian language in Senegal and support training with courses for military Senegal.
